DIRECTOR'S PERSPECTIVE

"In today's interconnected world, the true measure of education extends far beyond academic scores. The leaders of tomorrow must possess global awareness, cultural intelligence, adaptability, and the confidence to perform in international environments.

From a leadership standpoint, it is no longer a question of whether students should receive international exposure—but when and how effectively it is delivered. Early, structured global exposure equips students with perspective, maturity, and readiness that traditional classroom learning alone cannot provide."
